

Deborah Yedlin

Deborah Yedlin began her career as an investment banker working in New York, Toronto and Calgary. She switched tracks in 1996, freelancing for the Financial Post and later joining the Calgary Herald's business section. Deborah was the Alberta Views columnist for the Globe and Mail's Report on Business from 2002 to 2007, when she re-joined the Calgary Herald as its business columnist. Deborah is a regular contributor to CBC radio, commenting on business issues locally and nationally.

Deborah was born and raised in Edmonton, completing her Economics degree at the University of Alberta in 1984. She went on to complete her MBA in Finance at Queen's University in 1991. Deborah recently completed the Institute of Corporate Directors program jointly offered through the Rotman and Haskayne's School of Business.
